Less than zero (RN: Book 1) David Gunner

When reporter Ben Warren gains an unprecedented interview with Air Marshall, Chauer Denz, former commander of the disgraced gunship, RNO Bristol, and now a ranking officer of the notoriously secretive Royal Navy Orbital's, Ministry of intelligence. He expects little more than the usual bureaucratic short answers and misdirection, but he is astonished when he gains unparalleled access and blow by blow accounts to some of the ministries darkest secrets, such as:

Denz's involvement in the failure of the RNO to repulse the Koll annex of Britannia's Devon colony, which saw thousands dead and the loss of the planet.

The truth behind the devastating Koll invasion of Chinese space at LN-0R, which led to the single greatest military encounter in human history, and opened the door for the Koll advance on the SOL system.

What happened to Denz and the Bristol following the Koll incursion into Earth space where five thousand Koll warships faced off against the combined might of the Earth Defence Pact forces, in what would be the final battle for human existence.

The inability of the EDP to stem the growing threat from bandit raiders, who have expanded from the trade lanes into the solar system and are attacking at will.

RN, Book 1: 'Less than zero' is the 9,500 word introduction to a planned five book RN: series, and If you like descriptions of alien invasions, military responses and space battles, then this book is a must.
