The book is a reassessment of linguistic aspects of the English literary works in the multilingual contexts of India. It shows how Indian English has adapted to the indigenous ambiance while remaining the Indian variant of International Standard English. The book is a corpus based study with detailed excerpts from some of the well known and widely acclaimed authors of the period covered, like Vikram Seth, Amitav Ghosh, Salman Rushdie and Arundhati Roy. It would be of immense use and interest to academicians, research scholars, students and people interested in Language and Literature.
