Recent terror attacks and plots have taught us that the lonely, vulnerable, or disaffected are just a few mouse clicks away from terrorist recruiters. The anonymity of the internet and the sheer speed of communications across it make it an easy tool for recruiting and for streamlining terror group training and operations. The dilemma is that the internet is a forum for free speech and global commerce. But the underside is that it can also be a forum for violence and global terror. How to respect individual freedom and access and yet find those who abuse the internet and stop them before they act is a huge and difficult challenge.
