The Professor at the Breakfast Table Oliver Wendell Holmes

The reader of to-day will not forget, I trust, that it is nearly a quarter of a century since these papers were written. Statements which were true then are not necessarily true now. Thus, the speed of the trotting horse has been so much developed that the record of the year when the fastest time to that date was given must be very considerably altered, as may be seen by referring to a note on page 86 of the A utocrat. No doubt many other statements and opinions might be more or less modified if I were writing to-day instead of having written before the war, when the world and I were both more than a score of years younger. These papers followed close upon the track of the A utocrat. They had to endure the trial to which all second comers are subjected, which is a formidable ordeal for the least as well as the greatest. Para dise Regaiued and the Second Part of Faust are examples which are enough to warn every one who has made a single fair hit with his arrow of the danger of missing when he looses his fellow of the self same flight. (Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and don't occur in the book.)
